A Grand Son of Commodore Vanderbilt -The Answer to His Wife's Petition for a Divorce-Letters Produced as Proof of His Well-Meaning.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch NEW YORK, March 26.-The suit for the limited lvorce of Mrs. Edith Allen against Vanderblit addressed the following letter to his wife at Philadelphia:

"AIR WARNING.

"DEAR EDITH—As you have deserted the rooms at Mrs. Arnolo's, I have notified her that I shall give them up Tuesday next, March 20. I have accommodations for you at the Hotel Brunswick whenever you see fit to return to me. I am sorry, Edith, that you are taking a course which will end in giving you very much sorrow. You have refused, under the influence, of very bad advisers, an opportunity to see how mistaken you have been. I can see nothing further for me to do, but. pelleve me, when the time comes, and when it may be too late, you will say. "Van, why did you not tell me all this before?" Still loving you, I am your affectionate husband, "Van, why did you not tell me all this before?" Still loving you, I am your affectionate husband, "Van, why did you not tell me all this before?" Still loving you, I am your affectionate husband, "Van, why did you not tell me all this before?" Still loving you, I am your affectionate husband, "Van, why did you not tell me all this before?" Still loving you, I am your affectionate husband, "Van, why did you not tell me all this before?" Still loving you, I am your affectionate husband, "Van, why did you not tell me all this before?" Still loving you, I am your affectionate husband, "I me on the went to Philadelphia and sent a note asking her to see him The only reply he received was the one line:

"I will not see you, E. Allen."

April 21 Mr. Allen met a man in Philadelphia sead he possessed certain scandalous evidence and threatened to publish it. He was told to publish it, but nothing appeared. "It is true," says Mr. Allen, "that I am in receipt of an income of $200 per month outside of my business, but my connection with the firm of Bunker, Allen & Co. does not net me over $50 per week, and is inable to terminate at any time, as I own none of the money invessed. All the capital is borrowed. I am indebted to various persons in large amounts, and such debts exceed my assets by thousands of collars."

M divorce of Mrs. Edith Allen against Vanderbitt Allen came up on a motion for alimony and counsel fee in the Supreme Court yesterday. Vanderbilt Allen is a grandson of Commodore Vanderbilt, and is a partner in the firm of Bunker Allen & Co., stock brokers, at No. 58 Broadway. He married Edith De Silver, daughter of the late Frank De Silver, daughter of the late Frank De Bilver, when she was but a school-girl, December 16, 1880. They lived together until February 25, 1883, when he left her for a short time. In her affidavit, Mrs. Allen accuses her husband of snoring loudy, drinking to excess and with being on terms of intimacy with Edith De Belleville, the Australian wife of the actor of that name. She also accuses him of uncleanliness in person. Mr. Robert Sewell and Mr. William A. Wolff represent Mr.

Allen and Samuel G. Adams is attorney for Mrs. Allen.

THE HUSBAND'S REPLY to Mrs. Allen's allegations is a general denial. He claims to have been an almost model husband, cursed with a mother-in-law, and teils the following story of his marital joys and miseries: They went to the Brevoort House to live, but his wife was not satisfied. So to please her he moved. "I had always lived in New York," he says. "My friends and bushess interests were here, but to please my wife I moved to Philadelphia, where I knew hardly anybody. There I leased a house on Walnut street for eighteen months at $200 a month. This house was retained until Angust, 1882. It was richly furnished and my wife had everything she could desire. I kept three or four house sevrants and a coachman. I soid my trotting horses and bought a T cart, so mly wife could go driving with me. In the summet of 1881, at her request, we went to Newport, where I rented part of a cottage, with private table, paying $110 per week therefor." For three months they remained at Newport, and the rent for the unused house at Philadelphia had to be paid regularly. Servants and horses were takep-to Newport and solely out of consideration for his wife's condition Mrs. Allen had her mother spead several weeks at the cottage. At this time and for a long time previously the son-in-law and mother-in-law were not on terms of friendship. Says Mr. Allen of his mother-in-law. "She had unreasonably and mallelously interworth $1,500, which he paid in a short time. He also tells how he dismissed an cld servant simply to please his wife.

"When we went to live in Philadelphia," he says, "I took the old servant with me. For some reason, wholly unexpected to me, unless because of the fact that the servant seemed attached to me, my mother-in-law entertained a very strong feeling against her and inspired my wife with a large measure of the same feeling. When we were preparing to go to Newport, my wife, at her mether's instigation, as I believe, implored me to leave this servant behind and send her away. I consented and sent the servant to New York, where she afterwards died of a broken heart. While she lived I paid her expenses and also the expenses of her funeral and burial. There was nothing in, the world my wife could have asked of me or which I could possibly have done for her which would have speculation and wanted to come to New York, but upon his wife's insistance accompanied her to Cape May, where he again encountered his mother-in-law. This was in June, 1882. There, though he says he could not afford it, he rented a cottage for his wife. In September they went to Orange, N. J., and the next month came to New York. She wanted to board with her aunt in Harlem, while he favored taking a house down town. She had her way, however, with the understanding that the husband would not dine at home and would remain out all night on evenings when his business was especially pressing. His mother-in-law visited his wife, and during the ten days of her stay Mr. Allen, at his wife's request, remained away from home altogether. Notwithstanding: his kindnesses his wife did not like him. He says:

"About October 25, 1882, my wife said to me, 'I hate you,' and in various ways expressed her unreasoning and wholly groundless haired for me, whereupon I put on my hat and coat and went out of the house."

is directly instigated by his wife's attorney, samuel G. Adams, who, he alleges, employed detectives to watch him and hired a woman to attempt to secure evidence against him. He declared that, had it not been for Adams, he would long ago have become reconciled to his wife. An affidavit of John Wallace, a banker and broker, is appended, in which he testifies to his brother-in-iaw's affectionate disposition, sobriety and general good behavior, dwelling especially on Mr. Allen's kindness toward his wife. C. E. Wolff, a boarder in the same house in which Mr. and Mrs. Allen live, declares the husband to have been uniformly kind and affectionate. C. E. Jenkins, chairman of the house committee of the Lambs Club, says he roomed with Mr. Allen for years, and had never seen him intoxicated. E. R. McCarty, cashier of the Hotel Brunswick, had known the defendant for twenty years and had never seen him intoxicated.

whereupon I put on my hat and coat and went out of the house."

He let his daughter Mary, 11 years old, at home, to show that he intended returning to his wife. Then he went to live with his sister, and wrote Mrs. Allen a note, giving her AN OPPORTUNITY TO APOLOGIZE.

On March 5, 1883, he wrote her as follows:

"EDITH—Since I saw you last, when you told me you hated me, I have anxiously hoped I might have some word from you, but as you have not seen proper to send me any, I ask if you think it well that this state of affairs should continue? Whatever your feelings may be towards me (and they appear to be those of haired), do you not think Glady and her future should be considered? This is a very important crisis, and I do hope you will not allow yourself to be illy or hastily advised. I, therefore, ask you to meet me and have an interview, so that we may at least understand each other. I should very much like to see you this evening, and will meet you at any time and place you may name. You could meet me at the Office of the Probable Democratic Candidate for President.

FILENDS OF MR. FLOWER.

Mr. Allen received no answer to this letter, and on March 6 called and saw his wife at her house in Harlem. When he left she seemed to be willing to live with him again, provided he would give her a statement of his "interviews" with a certain lady. On March 9 the following was received:

DEMANDS A REFEREE.

"DEAR VAN—Since 1 saw you I have come to this unbiased decision: That a referee must be appointed to decide this trouble of ours. I must select the one, then when all is clear I will gladly come back to you. Yours with love.

He went back to his office, where he received the following note in answer to the one he had written, agreeing to keep her brother in his office as clerk.

written, agreeing to keep her brother in his office as clerk.

"Dear Van—I think it unnecessary to have a referee. If you will send me a statement in regard to your meetings with a certain lady from the 14th of February to March 3, 1883; when and where they took place and who were present, which will satisfy me of your innocence; that will suffice. If I desire further information after reading it, I will write you. Until this is arranged, do not try to see me. I shall expect this within five days or shall take such steps in regard to a separation as my counsel may advise. Now Yan, prove yourself, as I think you can, an hoaorable man, and I shall be so happy. Yours with love.

The next day Mr. Allen sent the following letter, to which his wife made no reply, having handed the case over to her lawyers. The letter reads:

ter, to which his wife made no reply, having handed the case over to her lawyers. The letter reads:

"MY DEAR EDITH—I received your note in which you wished me to send you a statement in regard to my meetings with a certain lady. I have prepared the statement and can accompany it with proofs, which must be perfectly satisfactory to you, and I am ready and willing to at any time show you the same. I am not willing to have those papers go out of my hand when there is a posibility of their getting into the possession of a man such as is now advising you. I am perfectly willing to put them in the hands of Robert Sewell or Mr. Choate or any first-class, responsible lawyer or gentleman, I don't care who he may be. I simply desire a man of character. Now if you are determined not to see me, and I suppose your counsel advises that, for of course his object is to make money and prevent, if possible, an understanding, do (for your own sake and our child's), not take action which you will regret the remainder of your life. I am anxious to do anything to settle the matter, not that I have any fear of the result, but for the sake of you and the affection I have for you. If you will see me and let me present to you the proofs you desire, in case you are not satisfied, and will place the matter before some man of character and reputation, I will abide entirely by that decision. You are being badly advised and urged on to your own rain—a wrecked life. You know, in your heart, how you love me, and my affection for you, and for the sake of that it would be a time to the sake of that it will be to the sake of that I want you to know how how deceived and mistaken you are. Then when that is done quietly and without ecandal you will be at liberty to commence any action you may see fit Do get yourself good advisers. You know you are surrounded by those who hat me. Mr. Flower's eyes twinkled; he smiled a smile and merely answered, soft and low, "Xes," and then lower still, "Yes,"

"You would accept the nomination, would you not?"

The word nomination must have been heard by Mr. Flower's friends, for they all turned round and stopped talking. Mr. Flower again langhed softly and said that he did not wish to be interviewed.

"Can you read German?" he suddenly said to the reporter. "Here is a copy of a German paper published in St. Louis; it has something in it about me; I can't tell what it is. The head lines as I see them read something, like this; "Wib stell tes mit Roswell P. Flower."

his daughter Mary "without friend, maid or any one to look after her." Mr. Allen denies that he abandoned his wife or that he had any intention of abandoning her. When he left for a few days on the 25th of February he says he did so because she made it so disagreeable and unpleasant he was compelled to go away. He continued to pay her board after she had eft, and says he would have returned to her had she permitted him. Mrs. Allen went to her mother's at Philadelphia, where Mr. Allen's brother valuly attemmed to see her with a view to effecting a reconciliation. > WASHINGTON, March 26.—Washington soci hill of Lent. Mid-lent has been duly celebrated by some quiet, early evening festivities, and this week shows more of a tendency to return to the social customs which prevailed during the earlier portion of the season. Many of the leaders of society who hied themselves away to the sea side acquaintances, are beginning to return, strength-ened for the remainder of the season, and are taking up the social thread where they dropped it to-day with calls and receptions, somewhat in formal in their nature, to be sure, but sufficiently formal to be quite pleasing to even the most scrupulous. The example set by the British Minster and his family, in their mi-carems ball last week, has proven somewhat contagious, and there progress. On Saturday Mrs. McEiroy gives her last Saturday afternoon reception for the season. These receptions have been very popular and their close will be regretted by mainy. The one of this week will be even more brilliaut than usual. A very large number of ladies have been invited to assist her in receiving. The Marine Band is to be present to dispense sweet music, and every effort will be made to render the afternoon a very pleasant one. The arrival of spring weather has added largely to the attractions of these receptions, many ladies attending in waiking dresses, while others continue in the conventional reception costumes which have been worn during the winter season. The imperative order was not obeyed to the letter, as the woman's alleged lover, Dr. Walter S. THE TRUE CONDITION of affairs prevaiing at the dead pilot's home. This could castly have been done by use of the pumping process moon the witnesses Stewart and dieorge Riley and Miss Mary Baker, who were willing enough to reveal pertinent facts to outsiders, but were naturally retteent when brought face to face with imposing official dignity.

At the home where the tragedy occurred a stream of visitors anxious to view the remains of the dead pilot kept coming all morning. The body had been neatly dressed in an Anchor Line uniform and placed in a handsome mahogany coffin. Thus disposed the figure presented the appearance of a decidedly handsome, middle-aged man. A cap bearing the word "Pilot" in gold letters concealed the ghastly wounds in the skull, and the face below it seemed life-like and natural. Round the coffin stood a dozen triends of the deceased, who all combined in testifying to his sterling quantities and amiable disposition. William Riley, his brother, also a veleram steamboatman, felt somewhat Indiguant over an error into which all the newspapers had fallen when they described the deceased as a drinking man. He stated that while it was true that his brother had been drinking immediately preceding the tragedy, he was a way temperate man; in fact it would not have been possible for him to retain his position as an Anchor Line pilot if he were otherwise. "He was about the oldest river man of his age on the river," he said. "He becan piloting in 1858 when he was about the oldest river man of his age on the river," he said. "He becan piloting in 1858 when he was only 18 years old. Them we have been possible for him to retain his position as an Anchor Line pilot if he were otherwise. "He was about the oldest river man of his age on the river," he said. "He becan piloting in 1858 when he was only 18 years old. The whom he was under age, but he he ran on the White kiver, and from that time on, until now, he has been piloting, working steadily from that day to this. We never ran together, because it's not a good thing for brothers to be on the same boat. You see, in case of accident, they go bunning for one another and both are apt to be lost, while if they'd been alone they'd have got away safe. As to the charge that my brother mistreated his wife or that he was not supporting his family there's no truth in it. The only time he ever laid hands on her was in self-protection. A few weeks ago he was going round with a black eye that she had given him with a poker. As to the failure to support, I know for a fact that my brother out of his earnings cleared off all the mortgages on his earnings cleared off all the mortgages on his wife's real estate, except $3.000. He was clearing this off when she began her career of extravagance, which very soon caused the incumbrances on the prop-very soon caused the incumorances on the property to swell again to $6,000. He didu't know for erly to swell again to $6,000. He didn't know for a long time what the real cause of the extravagance was, and, if his management of money matters changed after he had made the discovery, he made the change wisely. He was a man who acted coolly and deliberately and with good ludgment. He was a member of the knights of Honor and carried a life policy for $5,000 in a Hartford life Insurance Company, so that if his wife lives she will get $7,000, and will be able to clear her property from all incumbrance. Taking all things into consideration it don't look as it he was treating his his wife very badly." It don't look as if he was treating his his wife very badly."

of the dead pilot occurred at 2 o'clock this afternoon. On account of the division within the family which the tragedy has given rise to there seemed to be a prospect that the services would not be of a religious character, but that the Knights of Honor would perform the only ceremonial. The body will be aid in Mr. William Riley's family lot in Calvary Cernetery by the side of Mrs. Lizzie Williamson, their sister, a beautiful and accomplished young lady who died in child birth a year after her marriage, and to whom both brothers were devotedly attached.

Dr. A. S. Barnes, uncle of the younger doctor, child birth a year atter her marriage, and to whom both brothers were devotedly attached. Dr. A. S. Barnes, uncle of the younger doctor, Waiter S., called at the Post-Disparch office this morning and expressed deep regret that his name had been mentioned in connection with that of his nephew. He requested that the fact be made public that he was not and never had been the family physician of the Rileys, and had never seen any of them in his life. A vis't was made to Dr. W. S. Barnes' office, at No. 3154 Easton average, but he was not at home. A hady claiming to be his sister-in-law, stated that Mrs. Barnes had left the city on Monday, and when the reporter assumed her that a number of the neighbors had seen the lady in question that morning she assured him that it was a case of "double," she and her sister being so much alike that it was impossible almost to tell one from the other. The people in the neighborhood were strongly in favor of Dr. Barnes, whose conduct in sending letters to Mr. Riley, challenging him to fight. was characterized as manly and [courageous. "There isn't anything in the report intal Dr. Barnes was on intimate terms with Mrs. Riley," said Mr. Simith, the music dealer, who leaped into sudden fame as the father of the girl Bertha Smith, who got up a sbort-lived Mary Churchill scare a few months ago. "It's only a few days ago that Dr. Barnes assured me that the story was an absure one, and that it was may ago that Dr. Barnes assured me that the story was an absure one, and that it was may taken. In the case against the mother of seven children, when he had a bnyom young wife at home. Why, he told me he would not give his wife's little finger for all the Mrs. Rileys in the world."

A Good Market.

"We have a pretty fair market now," said Marretmaster Geo. Weisenburger this morning, "but nth killed a great portion of the vegetable crop, so that early vegetables are not plenty. Still, we've had tomatoes, peas, assuragus and cucumbers for some time. They are all rather dear. Strawberries are coming in now, but they are high-priced. We have had good spring lamb for quite awhile, too. Ive seen more abundant markets than the one we have now, but still we've got all the delicacies of the season."

THE RISING RIVER. Two Steamers and Five Barges Float

Off-Railroads Badly Crippled. The river has been rising very rapidly during the past four or five days and a foot and seven inches of an increase has been recorded on the gauge since yesterday morning. During the wind last night the steamers Sidney Dillon and My Choice with five large grain barges were torn oose from a point just below the Work House. The whole outfit was found this morning oppo site Carondelet, apparently aground, and efforts are being made to get the boats out of trouble. They are the property of the St. Louis and Mississippl Valley Transportation Company, and it is thought no injury has been done to any of the crait. The cause assigned for the breaking away is the strong wind, but it is quite probable the high water and swift current was the principal cause. Experienced river men anticipate some very high water in the present rise, but no one appears to know exactly where much more water is to come from. It will take fully eight feet more of a rise to do any great harm in this immediate vicinity, but the low lands between this point and Caro are in danger if there is a little addition to the present condition of the stream. At Cairo and Belmont the water is still steadily rising, and the railroads coming into Bird's Point are cut off from their cradles and a portion of the traces are under water. At Belmont the Iron Mountain tracks are flooded and no traffic has passed over them for several days. site Carondelet, apparently aground, and efforts

How the Tariff Reformers Have Let Down - Talk in Washington About Last Night's Democratic Caucus-The St. Louis Fast Mail-Capital Notes,

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, March 26.—The tariff reformer They admit themselves to be at the mercy of their enemies. They have lost all their ton inster, and instead of saying they will force the bill before the House and force all members to vote for it by applying the party lash, they say mildly that they "hope to pass the bill, and hope nany of those who voted against it last night will support it in the House." Instead of the attiude of dictation, however, which they yesterday professed to occupy, they now admit their posi-tion to be that of supplicants asking one-third of their party to vote against their convictions to help them take up the bill for considerat Some of them say that many of those who voted against the bill last night will vote for it in the louse as a party measure, and vote to take it up. The general expression of the press in all the East, so far as any expression is given, is that the caucus does not strengthen the attitude of the tariff reformers.

Illinois Wheat Crop.
By Teiegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

SHELBYVILLE, ILL., March 26 .- The wheat in this county has not yet suffered any material damage. Though there has been some very severe weather during the winter, the fields have in most instances been protected by snow. Wheat most instances been protected by snow. Wheat does not suffer so much, however, from the continued coid weather in winter as it does from the alternate freezing and thawing in the spring. The warm, balmy days of the past two weeks, together with the recent rains, have been very beneficial to the growing plant. Most of the fields examined have been found in excellent condition. The crop last year was only about one-half the average, and the berry was of an inferior quality. The acreage this year is about one-third more then it was last season, and, though the crop is not absolutely assured until it is in the sacks, the indications are that we will have an abundant harvest.

The details of the saie of a block of 1,000 Chicago and Kansas City tickets are getting trightfully mixed. Mr. Charlton, general passenger agent of the Chicago and Alton, at first refused to either deny or confirm the truth of the report of the transaction, but a few hours later on Saturday positively denied it to F. Chandler, general ticket agent of the Missouri Pacific. This morning a telegram comes with the information that Receiver Warker of the Cleveland, Mourt Vernon and Delaware Road says the tickets in Fisk's possession are not the ones when were stolen. He further denies all knowledge of the sale of any such tickets by his company, at least no account of such a sale is on the books of the company. He further adds that the tickets are of a "surreputious" issue. which I recognized as Wing's pistol. I asked him about it and he said that he had loaned Wing $2 and taken the pistol. Glenn began to tak roughly to me. He cursed me. He said" It seems you have gone back on me for Bert?" I said it was no such thinc. He began to curse and just then I heard a knock at the floor. Mr. Wing came in. He asked Joe, "What does it look like it meant." Wing said, "I don't think you ought to act this way, you had better go. It is bed time." Gleon said, "I'll not leave you. I'll see you don't make me leave." Just then he took the pistol and cocked it and as he was bringing it down Wing granbed the pistol. The short to get it back. They scuffled for several seconds, during which two shots were fired. They had hold of each other with one hand and both the other hands were holding the pistol. The shots were fired without intermission. Glenn let loose of his hold of Wing and fell backwards. I said, "For God's sake, Bert, I believe he is hurt. He's killed." Wing said: "My God! my God! I didn't intend to kill him. I was trying to get the builets out of the pistol. Wing then wanked out. I next saw him in the hold-over, when I was asked if I knew him. I said I did not. He said you might as well tell the truth, and I said I did. I saw Glenn at Mattle Roberts' house before the night he came with Wing." GOD SPEED THE ALERT.

LONDON, March 26.—The putting of the war sloop Alert, recently presented by England to America, to participate in the Greely search expedition, in commission yesterday, was be-comingly celebrated. James Russell Lowell hoisted the American colors at the Alert's peak. Fifty guests lunched on board, among whom were the Earl of Northbrook, first lord of the Admiral ty, and Lord Alcester (Admiral Seymour), one of the junior lords of the admiralty. Conspicuous among the company were many famous for Arctic explorations, as Vice-Admiral Sir Francis Me-Clintock, who accompanied the Sir John Frank-lin search expedition in 1848 and 1850, and commanded that of 1857; Sir Allen Young, who served under McClintock in the Fox and has George Nares, who commanded the Alert on her previous visit to the Arctic region ten years ago, the last twelve years, has made twelve yoyages to the North. Lieutenant-Commander Chadwick, naval attache of the Commander Chadwick, naval attache of the American Legation was present, also Lieut.—Commander Goodrich, who will take the Alert to America. Mr. Lowell proposed a toast to the Queen, to which the Earl of Northbrook responded. He said the Queen took a deep interest in the expedition, in which the Alert was to share,

THE TRIBUNE The Tribune says: "The Democratic party in the House stands to-day just where it did last night before the caucus in regard to the tariff bill. Mr. Morrison offered a resolution declaring that the party was pledged to a reduction of the tariff; that his bill furnished a basis for such action, and accordingly it should go to the committee of the whole and after a reasonable debate and opportunity for amendment should be passed. This was adopted, as well as a resolution saying that the decision of the caucus was not binding upon the representatives. To

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Modocs, it was decided to make athletics a feature of the club, and to change the name to the "Modoc Rowing and Athletic Club." It is the intention to have a spring and fall meeting annually, at which only members of the club will be allowed to enter. The use of the new Base-Bail Fark has been kindly offered the club free of charge, and it is hoped, with the hearty support and co-operation of each member, to make this new departure a decided success. The first meeting will be held in May, and a committee has been appointed to draw up a suitable programme, which will shortly be announced.

Texas Stock Interests-The Fine Ranges of the Southwest.

Colorado City-Its Rapid Growth, Commercial Interests, Tributary Trade and

and Pacific Railroad was pushing its way rapidly up like mushrooms along its track, often a mere attention of those of a speculative turn was attracted to these successive points, for it was readily foreseen that some important city would be the result, and it was a matter of considerable interest to many to know which one it would be. The railroad was completed to this point April 12, 1881, but passenger trains were not put on until June. From that time the wings of the tiny filedgling called Colorado City, from its location filedging cailed Colorado City, from its location upon the Colorado River, began to grow rapidly, and in less than a year it was "flying high" while various points had succumbed to the inevitable, "folded their tents and silently stole away."

You might ask the reason for this, and the best and most truthful answer would be

THE SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST.

Two years and a half seems but a short time in which to build and equip a city, and yet, here it is, fully 4,000 strong, and with as fine brick business blocks, opera house, court house, hotel, banks, etc., as you will see in the Southwest. It has a good brick school building, several private schools, three or four neat and tasty churenes, a street railway leading out to "Phœuix Park," which has not as yet risen from its ashes as it is sure at no distant day to do—a telephone system so complete that the musical "hello" is heard in almost every store—two weekly papers, one "The Colorado Cipper," the editor of which informed us he was soon to begin the publication of a daily, and every modern convenience or improvement within the reach of money and vim

The ticket sales for the same time was $47,131 92. This station is the last place of any importance in your journey westward until you get to El Paso. Just think of it; 363 miles with scarcely the semblance of a town.

But all along these plains, in the valleys of the streams and near the springs, stock is herded which supplies the markets of the East with beef; sheep are grown, furnishing their wool cilp, to be made into the thick garments needed in the North, where winters are long and severe, but which can be spared from the sunny clime of Sonthwestern Texas.

but if you possess enough of the needful to get a good start, if you understand the business, or go in with one who does. If you work, and are reasonably careful there is just as good a chance to-day as was ever offered, while the possibitties in agriculture, market farning, dairy, etc., are scarcely known, as they have not yet been tried.

As for business men—well, this city seems very weil stocked with them, perhaps, in these duit times, just before the "round-up" or the annual sorting of cattle and shipping or the sale of the wool ellp. Too many; but there are some men who could succeed anywhere, and there are openings in Colorado City for just such men.

Now, a few words for the situation of the city. It is not upon the bleak prairie, but is almost half encircled by the Colorado River, which has upon the opposite side rugged banks leading up to a delightful platetau—which must be very pretty in the summer. The river is spanned by handsome fron bridges, the streets are laid out with the regularity of a chess-board—wide, well kept, with very fair sidewalks. In the residence portion of the city are many very pretty sites for dwellings, and when the town ages and loses that look of newness it will be considered a very preity place.

The city has prospects of other roads. What one has not? One railway only seems to-beget an insatiable longing for another, and when the two pool of course we must have another; still this seems to be such an important point in traffic, new roads crossing the Texas and Pacific cannot afford to miss it, and the great stock ranges of the Pan-Handle and the Concho country must sooner or later be invaded by railroads.

As the county seat of Mitchell County, as a commanding point for trade, as the chief city of the region, as a prospective railway center and as a social and go-ahead place, Colorado has certainly as much prospect of improvement in the future as in the past, but while their present greatness has been thrust upon them, in a measure, by circumstances, their future must be ac

Dr. JACQUES,

From the New York World.

Mrs. Frank Leslie, widow of the well-known publisher, is to be married very soon to the Marquis de Leuville, an Anglo-French nobleman who is reported to be all that a maiden's fancy ever dreamed a nobleman should be. Three years ago Mrs. Leslie first met the Marquis, and after a brief courtship he made a formal tender of his heart and title. She was too much engrossed in extrihe made a formal tender of his heart and title. She was too much engrossed in extricating her husband's property from embarrassment and did not smile upon her noble suitor. He was persistent, however, and the marriage will be celebrated very soon. The couple will make their home in New York.

The Marquis de Leuville is 42 years old, and having travelled all over the world is couple will make their home in New York.

The Marquis de Leuville is 42 years old, and having travelled all over the world is anxious to settle down. He possesses an independent fortune and it is said is desirous of figuring in local society. He was born in Engiand and his family dates back 800 years or more. He claims descent from Oliver de Lourucourt, 1855, and his family name was given by Louis XIV, in June, 1650.

The Marquis is said to be a man of broad culture, a thorough linguist and one of nature's born poets, if his volume entitled "Entre Nous," which has gone through eight editions, may be taken as an index. He is fond of hunting, and as a pistol shot he has a reputation second to no one in France. He has devoted some time to art and several of his pictures have hung in European galleries. He is a member of half a dozen societies—literary, artistic and scientific, and in spite of all these attainments is said to be a thorough good fellow.

Laid by in my silent chamber,
I hear them stirring below;
Voices I leve are sounding clear,
And steps I know are in mine ear,
Still passing to and fro.
And I ask my heart, Shall I never more of mine own will pass through that door?

I ask, Oh! is it forever
That I have ceased to be
One of the group around the hearth,
Sharing their sorrow or their mirth?
Am I from henceforth free
From all concern with the things of life,
Done with its sorrow, and toil, and strife?
Shall they carry me forth in silence. Shall they carry me forth in silence,
With blind and sealed-up eyes?
Shail they throw the Windows wide to the air
And gather mementos here and there,
As they think, with tears and sighs,
"This she was fond of—this she were.
But she never shall need them any more?"
A. M. MUNSTER. TYPES OF WOMEN.

The Traits of Girls of all Nations

The Paris "Figaro" Gives la Belle Americaine All the Glory.

Stylish and pretty, independence personified, but very honest and pure-minded, is the American girl. She adores pleasure, dress, luxury; shows herself morally without concealment, such as she is, in a manner to decelve no one; knows she is attractive, and loves to attract without committing herself. Fiirts all the winter with this one or that one, only to dismiss him in the spring, choosing immediately another. Her resources are capital which never lies idle. She goes out alone; she travels alone; or, when it suits her better, with a male friend, with a confidence without limit, and au intimacy, in appearance, almost conjugal.

The one thus elected is allowed to describe his feelings and to speak of his love from and her evenings in listening to taik of business, mechanical inventions, farming concerns or the like.

She leaves her daughters to enjoy the liberty which she herself has enjoyed without grave abuse. Since nothing serious happened to her, why should Mary, Fannie or Jennie be less strong or less able to meet any emergency?

In one sense she has created the Paris fashions. Parisians detest her, provincials despise her, yet men of all nations are bewitched with her, though they do not marry her unless she has a large fortune.

With reddish hair, paler than golden, frank black eyes which neither droop nor quail, and a figure which it is impossible to initate, she lies back in a carraige as if it were a hammock; a natural and easy pose, quite unconscious of its voluptuousness. On foot she steps along briskly and unconcernedly, her heels tapping the pavement as she walks. foot she steps along briskly and unconcerned-ly, her heels tapping the pavement as she walks. Attracting many glances she is yet much occupied with herself and little with others. A plant from the broad wilds, which, put in a narrow space and finding itself hemmed in, stretches across the glass with-out disquieting itself with the thin frozen plants which vegetate around it. If under-stood better and criticised less this young girl would be more truly estimated at her just value.

An adorable face, which, in the full glare of day seems as though in moonlight, so pale and transparent in its coloring. Large eyes, frank yet modest, with long lashes. Little teeth which lengthen perceptibly, growing like grass in the country, until at 25 they suggest a key-board. Delicate and without pronounced figure when young, later enormously stout or dried up. Almost invariably hideous at 40. Extremely exact in small matters, a model of neatness.

There is a prudish simplicity in the arrangement of her chamber, which is only a place for sleeping and bathing. No one may exter there. To allow even her best friend to see so much as the pillow on which she sieeps! Oh, no! Shocking! Absolute mistress of her actions to the day of her marriage, but the slave of duty, she prepares herself from a child to be a good wife and metals.

She has her own place in society, and, if anything is lacking to her, she alone is aware of it. She hunts, rides horseback, and occupies herself with music, literature and polities.

evil-doing to rest in her mind. The daughter of a nobleman is under the safe-guard of hereditary or personal pride; the daughter of a peasant is guided by her conscience and follows a straight path.

Her mind is serious and sentimental. She awaits a young lord who is traveling around the world or an officer who is in India. She will marry him on his return if he comes her days in looking out of the window when the baicony fails or is forbidden her; is very ignorant, never reads, and much less writes. Desires to be married, not from calculation or ambition, but simply because a natural instinct makes her understand, even before she has ceased to jump rope, that a husband is an indispensible thing.

THE GERMAN.

Romantic and sensual. With her love enters first into the brain, then ascends to the heart. A pale blonde; she has the beauty of youth with a spice of the wicked one about it, and acts in a mauner that ought to please him. Her eyes look very modest, because she hides them under the lowered lashes. Loves men in general and always one in particular.

A rigid Lutheran, she is very severe on the sins of others, but settles her own directly with heaven. She receives cordially in the morning friends of whom she has spoken ill the night before. Has an air of being scandalized at this or that; it is a defence against others' severe judgements of her.

scandaized at this or that; it is a defence against others' severe judgements of her. Loves study and music and occupies nerself with pleasure in the details of house-keeping. Whatever her origin, she is above all a born housewife. She has a beautiful, face and form, which, however, quickly deteriorate.

THE ITALIAN.

Hate in heart: love in her eyes. The pride

Hate in heart; love in her eyes. The pride of a great lady with a sordid nature. Loves money and pleasure. Uusubmissive, idle, passionate. Ambitious, yet servile if her interests require it. She has an attractive person and knows how to dress herself in a material which perhaps is hardly cut out. Drapes or wraps herself in a scarf, arranges her hair with a pin and adorns herself with a pearl. Her voice, which has discords when she speaks, becomes harmonious when she sings. She simost always marries an Italian and does not seek strangers until after marriage. Credulous and superstitious, she believes in omens and bad signs, fearing the evil eye, two knives crossed and the point of a straw. nan to-day G. Smith, who was accused of grand larceny, was acquitted; Wm. Abit was sent to

of a straw.

She has a luxurious chamber, splendidly adorned with paintings, statues, mosaics and fine chandellers. The bed is a work of art, the satin curtains are held up by little Cupids apparently at play. They would be hard to satisfy if they were not content with their surroundings.

THE RUSSIAN.

She is beantiful, intelligent and indifferent to the opinion of the world. Promises hetself many admirers. Goes to the watering places, and is a reigning belle. She plays for high stakes, and gets angry when she loses. Wears Paris costumes in a way which makes them doubly charming. Her hair grows in luxurant waves. She has a nature which casts aside all veils, is fascinating and good natured. Talks better than a French woman; in everything she is and aclous. The habit of absolute command leaves it impress on her. She has never said to a servant, "Please give me this or thai," but at 12 years of age will order her nurse to be best-enti vexed with her. Loves dogs, truffies and champagne. Eats like a man. Has a luxurious room carpeted with fur rugs a passed a few days before and found occupied by a strange squatter and his family, consisting of a wife and two children, and seeing it apparently deserted broke open the door. A sickening speciacle greeted them. The single room was literally flooded with blood. The head of the man; had been severed from his body, and, in wanton fiendishness, had been stuck on a sharp bedpost, while the body was sitting in a chair in the act of mending a broken bridle. On the bed was the woman with an infant on her broast, both dead, with a long, sharp butteher knife driven through their bodies pinning them together and to the mattress. The only live objects in the room were a ferocious bloodhound, and a boy about four years of age. The dog sprang savagely at the intruders and had to be shot before an entrance could be effected. He had numerous deep gashes in him and was covered with blood, as was the child. In one corner of the room was a skeleton stripped clean of fiesh supposed to be that of the murderer, whom after a desperate struggle the dog had killed and caten. The murderer is believed to be from St. Louis, as in the dog's stomach, which was cut open, were found some undigested clothing and a piece of card board which turned out to be a ticket to Georre McManus' benefit at. the Grand Opers. House, March 31.

Corps of Patrolmen Who Traverse Regular Beats in all Parts of the City The Plan Adopted to Raise the Funds and Deal With the Venturesome.

The patrol scheme is the latest thing out i ottery styles, and as it is one of the curiosities of crime, it is deserving of a descript equivocal position taken by Maj. Harrigan toward lotteries, when he told the detectives to go out and fetch him the doors and counters of the offices which failed to close after notice was served on them, convinced the gen-tlemen who trade on human weakness served on them, convinced the gentlemen who trade on human weakness that the old plan of conducting the business would in future be attended with too much of excitement and adventure for their delicate nerves. All of them except Kasabianca Kaub succumbed, and their offices have since been deserted. Mr. Bobby Kerr, however, is an inventive gentleman, and as he had to have some method for acquiring the wherewith to satisfy his luxurious as he had to have some method for acquiring the wherewith to satisfy his luxurious tastes, he devised a plan which would, he felt satisfied, offer the police no handle to grip him by. He established an office and race-track in a retired room in East St. Louis, and, it is said, secured the services of that expert turfman and jockey, Henry Peterson, to manage his flyers. Then he mapped off the city of St. Louis into districts and organized a corps of patrolmen, one of whom he assigned to each district, just as a policeman is assigned to a beat. The difference between his patrolmen and those of the city was considerable, however. While the latter sought observation through blue uniforms, brass buttons and stars.

were to travel incog and keep their mission a secret save from their reliable patrons. While the city's patrolimen drew a regular salary for their services, Bobby's boys were to be allowed a commission on all the business they could procure. The advantages of this plan over the old methods of conducting the business were great. It involved none of those extraordinary rent bills, which are incident to the occupation of premises for illegal purpose. It enabled the management to increase or reduce the number of its branch offices, or to hail them all across the river out of uanger whenever there were signs of a cyclone forming at the Four Courts. It avoided the necessity for paying large bills for printing tickets, for tickets were not one of its features. If a policeman happened to locate and identity one of the "branch offices" he would have to take h horses which run races twice a day in the back room of the main office in East St. Louis. Each horse has its number, and, approaching a main or woman who is known to have a weakness for playing with fortune, the patrolman invites him or her to wager something on the day's races. He insists that the races are genuine, but allows the patrons to call them a lottery if they so desire. He is making up a book of combinations, and will sell chances on any three horses for stated amounts. The water must be put into his hands immediately, and he enters the patron's choice of horses on one of the pages of his book, out gives neither receipt nor ticket for the money. He simply acroes to call next day and tell the better whether his combination won or bot, and the latter has to take the chances on his doing it. The bets thus obtained are promptly reported to the office in East St. Louis and commissions are paid. It is a strictly cash business all around. When a combination whis, the man who put his wager on it is notified verbailly, and he can either go over and collect his winnings or have them delivered by hand. This is altogether too much a game of chance to suit the majority of lottery players, and hence the business is not as under the old plaus, where a man did not have to place quite so much blind trust in folks he did not know. Still, what business there is is very safe, and that is some comfort. The police department is cognizant of the operations of the patroinen, but there is a question as to how they can be reached. Under their methods it is very difficult indeed to procure such evidence as would make a case of violation of the lottery law, and the only plan left seems to be to run the patroimen in under the vagrancy ordinance.

It has been definitely decided by the Board of Directors of the Mercantile Library that this im-Directors of the Mercantile Library that this Important institution must have a fire-proof building. The project has been talked about for some time past without any practical conclusion having been reached, but the question has become one almost of life and death with the library and the directors are determined to make a strong effort in its behalf, as one of its best friends said, the library must either go up or go down. The collection of books is entirely too valuable to be left to the mercy of a chance five, and, more than this, the money problem is a powerful consideration in favor of the building project. The revenue of the library is not nearly sufficient to supply its many needs, and further postponement of the matter would make the condition of things worse. This concusion having been reached, several meetings of the directors and of gentlemen deeply interested in the institution have been held to hit upon some plan which would accomplish the desired object. One suggested by Mr. James E. Yeatman commended itself as the most practical and feasible and as likely to receive the widest support from the public. The plan contemplates, instead of offering life memberships as at present, issuing certificates of stock at $100 each entatiling the holder to the privileges of the library. These certificates or shares will be equivalent to membership, but will have the further advantage of being transferable, and thus may be held or sold as other property. It is believed that the certificate plan will be far preferable to that of attempting to raise the desired amount by subscription and of merely selling life memberships. In this way gentiemen who desire the privileges of the library for themselves or for members of their families may purchase any number of shares, and transfer them whenever it is desirable to do so. The plan has been tried with eminent success with other institutions of a similar character and in other cities. The few gentlemen who have been approached on the sublect by members of the board in portant institution must have a fire-proof building. The project has been talked about for some
